Faultless first driving test joy for teenager

PASSING your driving test is cause for celebration by itself, but doing so with no mistakes at all makes it extra special.

The faultless feat was achieved by Barwell teenager Daniel Haywood who received no minor or major markdowns in what was his very first driving test.

The 17-year-old only started lessons in August with Pass You Driving School and Daniel is now celebrating having a full driving licence.

He said: "I was nervous to start with on my test but then I managed to get into it, but I never imagined that I would pass without any errors."

Daniel's instructor, Hayley Noden, was delighted to see him pass with such flying colours. She said: "Daniel trained hard for his theory test and took the theory test on his 17th birthday, passing first time. He was a very natural driver able to put his theory training into practice on the roads and by early October we decided to book his practical test.

"His original test date was Deember 1 but unfortunately the snowy conditions that week caused the driving test to be cancelled.

"Daniel was very disappointed that his test was cancelled but managed to secure a new date of January 7 - imagine how he felt when he woke up to find another snowy day.

"However luck was on his side as the snow started to thaw about 10am which meant his test at 11.11am went ahead, despite the roads still being a little slushy."
